

The wait is over: the iconic ladder bracelet is now available in matte titanium, a perfect match for the Chronomaster Revival Safari and Chronomaster Revival Shadow models.

An iconic ZENITH accessory is now making its way to the most contemporary expressions of historical Chronomaster barrel-shaped models. When the Chronomaster Revival Shadow and Chronomaster Revival Safari models were unveiled with matte titanium cases to much acclaim, many wondered whether ZENITH would also reimagine its most distinctive bracelet for them. Now, the time has finally come for the ladder bracelet in matte titanium.

Originally designed by the revered Gay Frères company in 1969 exclusively for ZENITH, it was paired with some of the earliest El Primero stainless steel models, including the A384, A385 and A386. Distinctively designed with alternating open centre links and supremely comfortable, the signature bracelet now takes on a contemporary and highly ergonomic execution in matte-finished titanium, completing the looks of the Chronomaster Revival Safari and Chronomaster Revival Shadow models.

The bracelet is now available to purchase individually or directly on the two matte titanium Chronomaster Revival models.